CHAPTER ONE Counterculture: Past and Present - 1. As a society gradually builds a culture characterizing its way of life and embodying its collective beliefs and ideals, it usually discards many of those which still existing cultures hold or have held to be fundamental to their way of life. A new spiritual impulse is appropriated by discontented, oppressed, or more primitive groups of human ...

The EYFS, as will be explored more fully in Chapter 2, establishes a framework for children up to the age of 5 years, an age at which the UK required children to participate in compulsory education following the passing of the 1870 Education Act. Provision for younger children was thus non-compulsory, although there is ample
