Another of the Home books by Cardeno C. And another winner, IMO. Really need to read books about love conquering all right now and this definitely hit the spot once again. This one takes us on a journey with Aaron and Zach and both their families. We even have a little on Jake and Nate (from Where He Ends and I Begin) towards the end.

Home Again is a perfect example of this, with a large dash of angst and uncertainty thrown in due to Noah's accident and resulting loss of memory. I'm not normally a fan of stories that flip back and forth from present to past, but in the context of this story this works well as each flip to the past helps build memories of Noah and Clark as the meet and fall for each other.
